

What is the Auditor General's Role in Public Sector Accountability?

Public sector accountability is based on the premise that governing bodies are best served by knowing whether the responsibilities conferred on government departments and agencies are satisfactorily performed and intended results are achieved. The Auditor General brings an independent audit process to the manner in which these conferred responsibilities are discharged in the public sector and reports directly to the House of Assembly on the results of these audits. The role of the Auditor General complements the accountability relationship which exists between Government, its departments, agencies of the Crown and the House of Assembly.

How is Government Accountable to the House of Assembly?

The way Government spends public money is very important to Newfoundlanders and Labradorians.

Control of the public purse is carried out on behalf of the people by their elected representatives, the Members of the House of Assembly. While it is up to Government to draft budgets and spending estimates, Government cannot collect or spend taxpayers' money without the approval of the House of Assembly. After Government spends the money entrusted to it, there is an obligation to report back to the House of Assembly on how the money was used. This, the obligation to answer for actions taken, is the basis of the accountability relationship that exists between Government and the House of Assembly. As the governing body in this accountability relationship, the House of Assembly is responsible for:

- overseeing the activities of Government; and
- holding Government accountable for its handling of public money.

To assist this process, the Government provides information about how it used the public funds entrusted to it.

But what assurances do Members of the House of Assembly have that this information is appropriate, credible and complete? How can Members know that the information they receive accurately reflects the results of the activities of Government?

What is the role of Legislative Auditors?

The House of Assembly in this Province, as in Legislative Assemblies in other jurisdictions in Canada, uses the services of an Auditor General to assist it in carrying out its oversight responsibilities. Historically, the Assemblies have understood well the need for an independent Legislative Auditor and recognized the position's unique contributions to the public accountability process.

Answers to Frequently Asked Questions About the Office of the Auditor General

From the view of legislators, the value of Legislative Auditors has not simply been in their technical expertise, it has also been in their ability to conduct audits that may not please those being examined, and to report their findings publicly. This has made their roles indispensable. They have subjected the operations of the public sector as a whole to regular, independent examinations, acting first and foremost in the public interest, as acknowledged champions of open and transparent government.

Defining the unique and vital role of Legislative Auditors in the public accountability process revolves around four key points:

- their independence;
- their mandate;
- their reporting obligations; and
- their expertise in public sector matters.

As a result of working exclusively in the public sector, Legislative Auditors have acquired extensive corporate and operational knowledge of Government. They are specialists in the field of public sector auditing and their credibility with legislators (for example, on topics such as emerging public sector trends and accountability issues) is thus well established. Given their extensive interaction with legislators, Legislative Auditors are in the notable position of being aware of, and understanding legislators' concerns.

Furthermore, having a whole-of-Government mandate has allowed Legislative Auditors to speak to legislators about broad Government matters and to better identify those accountability and performance issues that have the greatest impact on Government. As a consequence, Legislative Auditors are better able to promote consistency of accounting across government organizations, and to make informed decisions about the selection, conduct and reporting of audits.

Why is Independence the Cornerstone of Legislative Auditing?

Independence, the state of being impartial and free from bias and conflicts of interest, is the cornerstone of legislative auditing. Anything that impedes an honest, straightforward and sincere approach to the performance of an audit will reduce public confidence.

In Canada, Legislative Auditors enjoy the confidence of legislators and the public, and their independence is unquestioned. The fact that this independence is largely backed by legislation instills public confidence in the process. For instance, were a legislative audit to reveal significant matters critical to government, those matters would, by law, have to be made known to legislators and the public.

The legislation under which the Office of the Auditor General in Newfoundland and Labrador operates is the Auditor General Act. This legislation was assented to on October 31, 1991.

What is Professional Independence?

To be independent in appearance as well as in fact, Legislative Auditors have been granted the freedom to act without undue direction or interference from government.

In practice, and subject to legislation and professional standards, this means that Legislative Auditors are able to determine when and how audits will be conducted and who will conduct them. It is they, for the most part, who have the license to set the audit program for their jurisdictions, choosing the bodies to be audited and determining the nature and scope of audits to be conducted.

From a public accountability perspective, this degree of independence is crucial. Only in this way can there be assurance that all matters of importance are subject to thorough examination, no matter how the results might reflect on those being audited.

What is Personal Independence?

Bolstering the independence of Legislative Auditors even further, legislators, not Government, generally make decisions pertaining to the appointment, tenure, reappointment, remuneration and resources of Auditors General. Such decisions are overseen and approved by each Legislative Assembly as a whole.

In this Province, the House of Assembly has assured this independence by appointing the Auditor General for a 10 year non-renewable term as an Officer of the House of Assembly, with removal permitted only for cause or incapacity. As well, the Auditor General Act provides the Auditor General with immunity from legal action.

How do Legislative Auditors differ from Other Audit Professionals?

Being an Officer of the House of Assembly means being, above all, responsive to the Assembly's interests and wishes. This position as an Officer of the Assembly, combined with the responsibility to audit the whole of Government, is what sets Legislative Auditors apart from other audit professionals working in the public sector.

What is meant by “whole-of government” mandate?

The Auditor General is the only official channel through which the House of Assembly is regularly and consistently kept informed of Government's stewardship of public funds.

The House of Assembly has granted the Auditor General a “whole-of government” mandate, covering organizations as diverse as Government departments, agencies, commissions, boards and Crown corporations. In this way, the House of Assembly is assured of receiving the Auditor General's conclusions and recommendations for the entire Government entity, regardless of whether or not the executive branch of Government has hired a private sector auditor to audit a specific organization or program of Government.

What is the Breadth of Audit Coverage?

Legislative Auditors in Canada meet their auditing objectives by examining a very broad range of issues. These issues are not necessarily the same ones encountered in the private sector, mainly because of the basic differences between organizations in the private sector and those in government. For example, because government organizations have public policy objectives, the results of their operations cannot be assessed based solely on their financial statements.

Recognizing this distinction, Legislative Assemblies have broadened the scope of the work that Legislative Auditors may do to obtain the information they need to hold government accountable. This information focuses on the financial and operational performance of government organizations and their compliance with authorities.

To whom does the Auditor General Report?

As an independent Officer, the Auditor General reports directly to the House of Assembly, at least annually, on anything the Auditor General feels should be brought to the Members' attention. The reports become a matter of public record and cover a wide range of issues of interest to legislators and the public, including compliance, evaluation of accountability relationships, management practices and control systems, and review of program results compared to established criteria. Having one auditor reporting to the House of Assembly is an efficient and effective means of ensuring that Members receive the information they need to hold Government accountable. The Auditor General also has direct access to the Public Accounts Committee. This provides a formal means of discussing reported audit findings with Members.

To whom are the Legislative Auditors Accountable?

Questions are raised from time to time about what the appropriate involvement and role of a Legislative Auditor should be and to whom Legislative Auditors are accountable?

The fact is, Legislative Auditors fulfil a distinctive position in the accountability regime of governments. They have been able to serve the accountability relationship between government and the Legislative Assembly because they have sufficient independence from government to be credible, they have mandates that are set out in legislation, and they have the forums to report directly to their Assembly. Moreover, they have acquired the necessary expertise to carry out their role effectively.

Such independence as that bestowed on Legislative Auditors requires that they themselves be accountable to their respective Legislative Assemblies. This means that Legislative Auditors are obligated to report directly to the Assembly on how they carry out their responsibilities and how the services they are providing add value to the accountability process.

The resources available to the Auditor General are determined through discussion with the House of Assembly Management Commission. This Commission is a Committee of the House of Assembly, over which the Speaker of the House presides, and is responsible for all matters of financial and administrative policy affecting the House of Assembly, its offices (including the Office of the Auditor General) and its staff. The Auditor General Act requires that estimates of the sums required to be provided by the Legislature for the payment of salaries and other expenses of the Office of the Auditor General be submitted to the Commission for its approval. As well, each year, the financial statements for the Office are to be audited by an auditor appointed by the Commission, with the audited statements being tabled in the House of Assembly.

Who Audits the Auditor General?

Each year, the financial statements for the Office are to be audited by an auditor appointed by the House of Assembly Management Commission, with the audited statements being tabled in the House of Assembly.

As well, the Public Service Commission, the Government Purchasing Agency and the Office of the Comptroller General have the authority to and regularly review related aspects of the Office's operations.

Furthermore, a sample of our audit files are periodically reviewed by a representative of another Canadian Legislative audit office to ensure that our files comply with Canadian generally accepted auditing standards.

Finally, the Office participates in the Practice Inspection Program of the Association of Chartered Professional Accountants of Newfoundland and Labrador to ensure we maintain an appropriate level of quality and adhere to appropriate standards.
